Dear Authors,

The paper entitled "Developing the Indonesian student's personality through recognizing local culture and literature: A brief study of Bugis pappaseng" explores the potential of local culture and literature to promote positive personality development in Indonesian students. While the topic is interesting, the paper requires further development and revision to be considered for publication.

The authors provide a brief overview of the Bugis pappaseng tradition and its potential role in promoting positive personality development. However, I recommend that they provide more detail on the data collection and analysis methods used in the case study. This would help readers to better understand the basis for the authors' conclusions and the generalizability of their findings.

The writing style of the paper is generally clear, but some sentences are overly complex and difficult to follow. I recommend that the authors simplify their language and use more concise and direct phrasing where possible. Additionally, the authors should carefully proofread and edit their paper for grammar, spelling, and punctuation errors to ensure that it is free from errors and written in a clear and concise style.

Furthermore, the authors should provide more discussion on the implications of their findings for future research and practice. This would help to contextualize their study and demonstrate its relevance to broader debates in the field. For example, the authors could explore how their findings could be applied in other contexts or with different populations, or they could discuss how their research contributes to our understanding of the role of spirituality in personal growth and development.

In conclusion, while the paper presents an interesting topic, it requires significant revision and development before it can be considered for publication.

Regards,
